REALITY BITES

A belly full of In-N-Out knocked us into a dream-filled REM sleep for the flight back from California. Reality, however, was waiting when the wheels touched down in North Carolina.

DREAM: Sun, sand, surf, snow — enter any dream destination here _____.

REALITY: It's 1:30 in the morning. Flew four and a half hours. Worked all day. In the heat. Neck hurts. Stiff. Tired. Hungry. Need a shower. Phone's dead. Still gotta drive home. And it starts all over this week, minus the plane.

DREAM: Scott Speed gives up 16th place in favor of two tires with four laps to go. Most of the competition adopts that same plan, and on the restart Speed has just enough grip to weave through five-wide traffic, sneak into the top 15 and follow through on what was a solid day.

REALITY: Speed gives up 16th place in favor of two tires with four laps to go. Most of the competition adopts the keep-track position plan, and on the restart Speed is left with little chance to regain what he lost. He finishes 24th.

DREAM: The No. 83 is its usual strong self at Auto Club Speedway. Just like it has been in the previous seven races there, with a pole and six finishes of 12th or better.

REALITY: The No. 83 is not its usual strong self. First, Reed Sorenson fights grip issues in the front. When that's corrected, the issues shift to the rear and the afternoon becomes a battle of balance. Sorenson climbs into the top 20 by lap 160, but two late pit stops can't keep him there. He finishes 27th.

DREAM: A berth to baseball's World Series comes down to a Game 7 showdown between two Red Bull athletes — Phillies shortstop Jimmy Rollins and Giants ace Tim Lincecum. Two outs, bottom of the ninth ... you fill in the rest.

REALITY: Game 7's a long way off, but the two will meet in Game 1 of the National League Championship Series on Saturday night in Philadelphia.
